a job but to lose it because of the hurricane [redacted] has now moved in with Danny's cousin in California but luckily he has a job unlike those other folks that won't get a job because they are waiting for Fema to give them unearned free money. I'm sorry Santa but my tolerance is getting short with this [redacted] type of people who [redacted] live that lifestyle, and I have a son Christopher in the U.S. Army stationed in New York that has already done a year in Iraq and is going back for another year in July we are so proud of him but I have had so many situations to deal with Santa just bring me inner peace so we can get through the times ahead.
